El Calafate is located in southern Patagonia and has experienced a very rapid growth in tourism in less than a century. It is set amidst the extraordinary landscapes of Lake Argentino and gigantic Andean glaciers. The city has gradually urbanized but it has kept its pioneer village charm and local crafts can be found in the markets. El Calafate provides the nearest access to Los Glaciares National Park, which includes more than 300 glaciers and is a UNESCO World Heritage Site since 1981. By following Route 40 you will find abundant wildlife and magnificent, diverse scenery.
