When we say Iguazu we think immediately of the falls on the borders of Argentina, Brazil and Paraguay. Lush tropical forest surrounds the falls and is home to a dense and diverse flora and fauna. The setting, the power (one of the highest flow rates in the world) and the colours of the Iguaza Falls are truly spectacular. Garganta del Diablo or the Devil's Throat is the principle fall measuring nearly 90 metres high. There are about 250 other falls covering an area of less than 3 km. The Iguazu National Park is a UNESCO World Heritage Site since 1984. The main town is Puerto Iguazu.
