Rio Gallegos is situated in the extreme south of the country and is an industrial city and major port. It is a passageway to Antarctica and a good place to stock up on water, fuel, food, etc. before starting this route. It is worth visiting for its surrounding natural sites. Laguna Azul, a beautiful azure blue lagoon is nestled in the bottom of a volcanic crater. It is less than an hour's 4x4 drive south of the city and has many surrounding hiking trails.

Further south towards Cabo Virgenes you are at the tip of the world. It is also the beginning of Highway 40 that goes up to the Bolivian border. An immense feeling of freedom may overwhelm you as you find yourself at the eastern mouth of the Magellan Strait, one of the southernmost points of the planet before Antarctica. Estancia El Condor is easily accessible by 4x4. It is a former pioneer site on a huge, isolated piece of land 40 000 hectares in size. Be seduced by its forests, lakes and rivers along its isolated, wild paths.
