Antofagasta is a coastal city of passage for travellers. It is connected to Santiago by the Pan American Highway, or Highway No. 5, and is bordered by the Atacama and Tarapaca regions and Bolivia and Argentina. The historic district, Barrio Historico, between the square and the old port shows evidence of the British colony in the nineteenth century. You will see wooden Victorian and Georgian buildings, fountains surrounded by palm trees, the Plaza Colon decorated with bougainvillea and mimosa and the Torre Reloj, a true replica of Big Ben.

From Antofagasta you can head northwards to San Pedro or southwards to Copiapo. The region also has a very special site, the Portada. This huge rock arch standing in the ocean lies about 20km north of the city and is an amazing natural monument worth visiting.
