Coyhaique lies at the heart of Patagonia just a few kilometers from Balmaceda. The Cerro Mackay mountain overlooking the city offers magnificent climbing and hiking opportunities. The river that borders the city, el rio Simpson, is known for its good fly fishing. The people of Coyhaique are very warm and have maintained the soul of the city for generation after generation. At Feria craft market you can find many handmade leather, stone, wood and wool items. The area around the town is picture-perfect with its high snow-capped mountains. From Coyhaique you can head north or south to continue your Chilean adventure.
